Seth McCauley is a defense attorney in Fraser Stryker's Litigation practice, focusing on representing construction companies, executives, and others across the Midwest facing complex business and professional negligence litigation.

A former college athlete, Seth's competitive spirit, aptitude for hard work, and analytical nature are valuable assets for his law practice. He approaches his clients' issues with fresh ideas, a new perspective, and a deep desire to help. Understanding that litigation is inherently adversarial, Seth does not shy away from courtroom, but always places the best interest of his clients first.

Working to cultivate a high level of trust with clients, Seth strives to demonstrate through actions that he truly cares and is willing to go the extra mile to achieve a successful result for his clients. He believes that having a strong relationship with his clients requires him to build a connection beyond the matter. Clients can rely on him to be highly communicative and attentive to their questions. Through his effective communication skills, he describes the litigation process clearly for clients, painting a picture of the opportunities and challenges of their case. He then works side-by-side with clients to uncover strategies that will produce a favorable outcome.

Seth attended Creighton University School of Law, where earned his Juris Doctor in 2020. While attending law school, he participated in the Tulane
